

Alzheimer's Art

After learning he had Alzheimer's disease, American Artist William Utermohlen drew one portrait of himself each year for the last six years of his life. Attached is the final portrait before Utermohlen died. It does make you wonder - were his artistic skills simply suffering from the disease or does the image depict what everyone looked like to him?

